Why do we have earwax?

Ear wax is a natural mechanism that allows the migration of old skin and wax out of the ear. It helps to protect the ear canal from infection. But, too much wax build-up can become a problem as it can cause a blockage in the ear canal, sometimes leading to discomfort, temporary hearing loss and even pain.

What causes a blockage?

- Hard wax build-up, especially in the elderly, can lead to impacted wax.
- Daily use of earbuds can push the wax deeper into the ear canal forming an ear wax plug. They can also damage the ear drum and middle ear structure, sometimes leading to infection.
- Hearing aid, ear plugs and headphones prevent the wax from being excreted naturally
 - Recurrent ear infections
 - History of recurrent impacted wax
